Guidance for the Medical Evaluation of Law Enforcement Officers

ACOEM’s electronic subscription-based Guidance for the Medical Evaluation of Law Enforcement Officers provides physicians who treat law enforcement officers (LEOs) with the information to make medical qualification recommendations that promote officers’ health and safety while at the same time ensuring their ability to protect civilians. The LEO Medical Guidance is also a valuable tool for public safety personnel and members of national and international associations representing law enforcement, law enforcement executives, municipal managers, attorneys, and insurers. It covers essential job functions, fitness-for-duty criteria, surveillance issues, and wellness/health maintenance topics. Content is developed by a panel of experts – members of ACOEM’s Public Safety Medicine Section and other key stakeholders including law enforcement organizations.

Existing medical evaluation sections include:

- Diabetes
- Cardiovascular issues
- Vision
- Hearing
- Medications
- Pregnancy
- Infectious Diseases

Topics under development include chapters on prostheses, sleep disorders, and substance abuse, and sections on blood, seizure, and pulmonary disorders.

A one-year subscription is $99.95. Enrollment provides full on-line access to these guidance documents and the periodic updates of this valuable resource. After subscribing, log in anytime at ACOEM’s web site (www.acoem.org/leoguidelines.aspx) to use this on-line tool available to you 24/7 for your convenience.
